

About Us

Publishing Black College Wire Articles

The news service site is free and readily available on the World Wide Web. Editors are free to use Black College Wire editorial content as long as Black College Wire is credited and writers receive a byline. When articles are used on Internet sites, please link to Black College Wire (www.blackcollegewire.org). To contact a Black College Wire editor, e-mail bcwire@hotmail.com. About Black College Wire Black College Wire Success Stories Read about former Black College Wire interns who have gone onto careers in journalism. 2005 Excellence in Journalism Winners

The Black College Communication Association today announced the winners of the 2005 HBCU "Excellence in Journalism" Student Newspaper Contest. 2004 Excellence in Journalism Winners

The Black College Communication Association today announced the winners of the 2004 HBCU "Excellence in Journalism" Student Newspaper Contest. All News Doesn't Make it to Print

With Black college newspapers struggling to maintain a campus presence, many Black journalism students are finding it harder to hone and showcase their skills. Contributing to Black College Wire

Learn how you can participate in Black College Wire. Frequently Asked Questions

Find out more about Black College Wire.

Black College Wire is a news service established in 2002 to promote the journalistic work of students at predominantly black colleges and universities and link those young journalists to training and employment opportunities in the field.

The news service was initiated as a project of the Black College Communication Association, an organization for faculty members teaching journalism and mass communications at black colleges and universities. Black College Wire partners have included The Maynard Institute for Journalism Education, The Black Collegian magazine, the National Association of Black Journalists and North Carolina A&T State University.

The project was originally funded by a grant from the John S. and James L. Knight Foundation, a Miami-based foundation that promotes excellence in journalism worldwide and invests in the vitality of 26 U.S. communities. Additional support has come from the Freedom Forum and the Ethics and Excellence in Journalism Foundation.

The news service reinforces the training that students receive in the skills and principles needed to produce quality journalism. It also provides a regular news report reflecting black college life that is available to campus and other news outlets, and links students to training and employment opportunities in journalism and related fields.

Black College Wire offers assistance and training to college journalists upon request. For more information, e-mail bcwire@hotmail.com.